

Writing in cursive is exciting. Children who learn cursive will not be lazy if they practice. Everyone will need to work hard to be quick at writing.

In the United States we use the word cursive, but they use different words in places like New Zealand, Australia, and the United Kingdom. People call it joined-up writing, linking, or double writing. For some countries, cursive has been used for hundreds of years. The Hebrew, Roman, and Yiddish

alphabets all have cursive letters. What kind of writing do you think they do in Canada?

Many Americans have written in cursive.

Thomas Jefferson joined most of his letters when writing the Declaration of Independence. Our president, Abraham Lincoln also wrote the

Gettysburg Address in cursive. I wonder if Queen Victoria of Great Britain ever wrote in cursive?
