

The Salt Lake

Once upon a time a long, long time ago, I mean a really, a long time ago., when the Salt Lake wasn't salty, yet. Anyways I'll get to the story. On a sunny day in August, there lived two giants named, King Jeffrey and Prince Phillip. They lived in a very big castle (cause their giants) King Jeffrey was always playing jokes on his brother, Prince Phillip. Like saying look under there. Then Phillip would say under where? He also puts ketchup on the toilet seats. Also, he put plastic wrap on the toilet seat. Well, Prince Phillip was sick and tired of his brother's pranks. So one day while Jeffrey was in the kitchen while he was not looking, Phillip unscrewed the salt-shaker lid. Jeffrey wanted to make soup. So he goes and finds a very nice pot (the Salt Lake). He was chopping up carrots, chicken, onions, tomatoes, and more. He peppered the soup. Then when he went to salt it all of the salt poured out into the pot. The king tried it. Yuck! It was so gross! Then his brother came in and laughed at him. The king got so mad he chucked all of the pepper at Phillip. Then king Jeffrey laughed hard at him. Also, King Jeffrey never ate that bowl of soup again. That's how the Great Salt Lake was formed.
